A Bookmarked Book

A title page, with a line of text under the title.

Quebec opens the first part with no title of its own on the page, so only the bookmark says where the part begins and what it is called. The text goes on long enough to read like the start of a real part of a book.

Loud Words

Romeo follows a heading set large, which the layout alone would take for a chapter title; under the bookmarks it is only a heading in the text.

The Second Part

Sierra begins the second part, whose title is set as plain text like the lines around it, so nothing but the bookmark marks it as a title.

An Aside

Tango is the aside, a section the outline lists under the second part, and it ends the book here.
